Welcome

A note before you begin

If you opened this diary, something brought you here. A wish to be more present. A hope to parent with less yelling and more vision. A quiet sense that you want this work to compound, not just survive.

This diary is small on purpose. Three short prompts a day, one shared reflection on Sundays, a five-minute review at the end of the week. It is built to fit into a tired Tuesday night, not a perfect Saturday.

What it asks of you: three minutes most days. Honesty over polish. Showing up imperfectly more weeks than not.

What it gives back: a year of small noticing. A record of who you were as a parent this season. A quiet steadying of how you show up.

There is no right way to use this. Skip days. Come back. Write a single line. Write a paragraph. Whatever lands today is enough.

From all of us at Ceria — welcome to the year.

How to Use This Diary

Five small habits, daily through weekly

1. Three minutes a day.

Open the diary at night. Write one moment with your child, one feeling you noticed, one thing you want to try tomorrow. That's it.

2. Reflect on Sunday.

Once a week, sit with the Sunday reflection question. Write more here than on weekdays. This is where small noticing turns into seeing.

3. Five-minute weekly review.

Sunday night, take five minutes alone: one thing that worked, one thing that didn't, one intention for next week.

4. Monthly review.

Every fourth week, the diary pauses for a one-page monthly review. This is where scattered effort starts to compound.

5. Imperfect is enough.

Skip days. Skip weeks. Come back. The diary is here to serve you, not the other way around. Three honest entries are worth more than thirty performed ones.

Setting Up the Year

Three short prompts before you begin

1. What season is my family actually in right now?

2. What kind of parent do I hope to become this year?

3. What's one thing I want our home to feel more like?

Whatever you wrote — that's where you're starting from.

The Twelve Principles

The arc this diary will walk you through, four weeks at a time

- 01 Parenting Mindset Effective parenting is formation, not control.
- 02 Child Development Most "bad behavior" is developmental, not moral.
- 03 Self-Regulation You cannot regulate your child if you cannot regulate yourself.
- 04 Communication Empathy first, then redirection.
- 05 Discipline Discipline is teaching, not punishing.
- 06 Emotional Coaching Game it to tame it.
- 07 Routines Calm structure beats constant reminding.
- 08 Behavior Repeating behavior has a function — find it first.
- 09 Character Built one small repeated act at a time.
- 10 Connection The relationship is the curriculum.
- 11 Special Contexts Pressure outside the family shows up inside it.
- 12 Integration Reflection turns scattered effort into growth.

One expectation I'll lower this week to match the season we're actually in.

FIVE-MINUTE WEEKLY REVIEW

One thing that worked this week

One thing that didn't

One intention for next week

Year-End Review

Looking back. Looking forward.

1. Three moments from this year I want to remember always.

2. Three things that got harder this year.

3. Three things that got better — small or big.

4. What did this year cost — and was it worth it?

5. What old story about myself as a parent am I leaving behind?

6. One word for next year.

A Closing Word

If you have made it to this page, you have done the work most people never do: you sat down and tried, week by week, to be more present in your own family.

There is no finish line in parenting. The year that just closed was a year of small honest entries on tired nights, of weeks you skipped, of weeks you came back to. All of it counts.

Look at this diary again in five years. The handwriting will be the same. The child you wrote about will be older. The parent you were will be a person you barely recognise — softer, steadier, more here.

Keep coming back. That is the whole secret.

*With warmth and respect,
The Ceria team*
